

Dwen Moore, Famous Players Star Is Paramount Pictures.

"Hold it!" When Director Del Henderson yelled those instructions to Owen Moore, as the popular Famous Players star dangled over the river, it is no wonder that a gasp of protest escaped from his lips. It all happened during the staging of an adaptation of Rol Cooper McGree's celebrated comedy-drama, "Holding Stones," a Paramount Picture, in which Owen Moore and Marguerite Courtot are starring.

pentine charms of the character.

"The history of the stage will be written upon the screen," says Nazimova, the noted dramatic star, who will make her first appearance in photo dramas under the direction of Herbert Brenon. "This is the only way in which the art of the player can be perpetuated in the same permanent way as that of the painter, the sculptor and the author. Even the singers now can send their voices down to posterity by means of the gramophone. It is this function of rescuing dramatic art from oblivion that should dignify the photo drama."

Lenore Ulrich, that popular little star of both screen and stage fame, has just arrived on Broadway from the Morosco-Pallas studios in Los Angeles, where she has been appearing before the camera during the past three months. Miss Ulrich's first photo play to be released on the Paramount program and resulting from her recent sojourn in California, will be "The Intrigue," a stirring drama by Julia Crawford Ivers. In this play the star appears in the role of beautiful Countess Sonia Varni, a secret service spy in the employ of the Russian government.

tor, James Kirkwood, together with all the members of her company, will spend a week in the beautiful Arlington Gardens, at Santa Barbara, Cal., enacting various scenes for "Dubie's Adventure," the second of her Mutual star productions. Considerable New-Port-Tosado atmosphere was needed for a number of the exterior scenes, and the Arlington Gardens were chosen by Director Kirkwood as the most appropriate in that section of California. In these particular scenes, more than 200 "extras"—men and women—attired in all sorts of "high society" getups, are being brought into play.

A group of Russian dancers of the imperial Russian ballet, which delighted New York and Chicago audiences during the last stage season, appear in "The Prince of Graustark," now being filmed in five acts by Essanay. Classic dancers also appear in numerous scenes. For these parts of the picture unusual backgrounds, one of them a beautiful estate on Chicago's north shore, were obtained. Bryant Washburn and Marguerite Clayton appear in the leading roles. The photoplay is taken from George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel, which is a sequel to his "Graustark," also filmed by Essanay.

Triangle patrons are given a splendid chance to study the features of Charles E. Hughes' "double" in "The Thoroughbred," the Southern horse-racing drama, by C. Gardner Sullivan, in which Thomas H. Ince presents Frank Keenan as star. He is Will Bray, the well known veteran character actor, who is now appearing regularly with the Ince forces. His recent appearance in an impersonation of former Justice Hughes, before the visiting Knights Templar at Los Angeles, recalled to many old stage followers his striking resemblance to the Republican presidential candidate. Bray is remembered by many for his characterization of "The Minister to Dahomey" in the original production of "A Texas Steer."

LONG SEARCH IS REWARDED

California Mother Finds Her Kidnapped Son after Twenty-Three Years.

There is a white haired mother in Los Angeles, Cal., whose heart is filled with joy for the first time in twenty-three long years. And there is a sailor lad aboard the United States receiving ship Rainbow somewhere in the Pacific who knows now that the love of a mother whom he long believed to be dead is following him wherever he goes.

The story of the separation and reunion was told a few days ago by Mrs. M. E. McGlothlen, a retired business woman of Los Angeles. Twenty-three years ago, in the little town of Crete, Neb., the boy was kidnapped from his mother. He was but three years old at the time. In the week following his disappearance the mother's hair turned white.

But never once in the years that followed did Mrs. McGlothlen rest in her search for him. "I was kind to every lonely young man I met," she said, "because I hoped that some mother, somewhere, would be the

LUMBER TOWN STOPS WORK FOR WEDDING

All Business Halted When Postmaster and Railroad Agent Takes Bride.

ELKINS, W. Va., Sept. 2.—Operations at the lumber town of Bemis were entirely shut down when John O. Welchone, agent for the Western Maryland railroad and postmaster, was married to Miss Flora Laning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Laning. The marriage was solemnized in the Presbyterian Church by Rev. Frederick H. Barron, D. D., pastor of the Davis Memorial Presbyterian church of Elkins. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The bride, who wore a handsome wedding gown and veil, was given in marriage by her father. As the wedding party entered the church Mrs. P. C. Bowers sang "O Promise Me." The flower bearers were little Miss Thelma Fink and

same to my son, lost to me."

Search for Son Unfruitful.
The search led the mother back and forth across the continent. Once she went to Cuba. When she was living at Santa Monica, Cal., the United States ship Colorado, upon which her son was then serving, anchored in the harbor. But she did not know. And he did not know he had a living mother. At another time, last year, when Mrs. McGlothlen was visiting the San Francisco exposition, her son was in the city at the same time. But again they never knew.

Two months ago she learned definitely that her son was in the navy, aboard the Rainbow in San Francisco harbor. She took the first train for the Golden Gate and at once went aboard the ship. Her son was enlisted under the name of Carl Emerson Collins. There in the officers' quarters of the Rainbow they met, mother and son, after almost a quarter of a century.

Master Richard Litzberg, and the bridesmaid and best man were Miss Dorothy Dindinger and Dr. Robert W. Dunham. R. M. Eagle and P. Fink were the ushers. Following the wedding a dinner was served at the home of the bride. The Bemis band met the bridal party at the station when they departed just afternoon for a wedding trip, and rendered a number of selections. Mr. and Mrs. Welchone will spend some time at Atlantic City, after which they will go to New York, up the Hudson, the St. Lawrence and to the Thousand Islands and other points before returning to Bemis, where they will reside. Mr. Welchone has been engaged as station agent at Bemis for six years, and his bride has for some years been stenographer for J. M. Bemis & Sons, lumber manufacturers.
